

Vaulting

A person wearing a green turban and a green cape stands in a grassy field, facing away from the camera. Behind them, a large, crumpled green tarp is spread out on the ground, creating a wide, flat surface that resembles wings or a large platform. The background shows a vast, open landscape under a bright, cloudy sky. The overall color palette is dominated by greens and blues, with a warm, golden light suggesting a sunrise or sunset.

If you want to grow further, be more; if you want to lead, join the community headed to new stars.

Humans are spreading, expanding our reach beyond Earth. Some of us move up and out and some of us stay behind, a fleshy anchor of consciousness in the cosmos. Like branches on a climbing vine, we stay connected to each other... Some produce resources, others consume or decompose, and others provide protection. Yet we are all explorers of the worlds – this being what it is to be alive and aware – each traversing unknown terrain.

Efficient energy production and consumption has challenged humanity for millenia. Now, we apply knowledge gleaned from other branches of life to our own. Plants have long harnessed energy directly from the sun. Within specialized structures called plastids – green chloroplasts, yellow, orange, and red chromoplasts – light is harvested by complexes embedded in the intricately- folded thylakoid membrane. These plastids can be expressed in human-plant hybrids, Chlorohumans, capable of sustaining life with (nearly) only water and starlight.

Vaulting to Greener Heights

The process of becoming Chlorohuman begins with an introduction to the expansion of a solitary self into that of a greater organism, connected to many other selves. It continues with integration of novel sensations and indirect memories into a new personhood, and concludes with coalescence into a self-replicating starship. As this is a genetic transformation, it does take time.

Today you'll prepare for your preliminary Vaulting session after which you'll decide whether or not to complete your metamorphosis.

To begin the Introduction to Vaulting go to www.thisyearning.com/vaulting or scan this:

(c) 2022 This Yearning

